

Huy Nguyen Trieu in 7 bullet points:

- CEO of The Disruptive Group, a business builder in finance
- Co-Founder of CFTE, an education platform for professionals to acquire the skills for digital finance
- Associate fellow at Oxford Said Business School, lectures about innovation in finance
- Founding partner of the Asian SuperCharger, the largest FIntech accelerator in Asia
- Member of the Consultative Working Group for financial innovation at ESMA, the European regulator
- Previously Managing Director at Citi
- Lecturer at Oxford, Imperial College, Hong Kong University and CFTE

Huy Nguyen Trieu is the CEO of The Disruptive Group, a business builder in innovation and finance. He has navigated between startups and large organizations, from tech CEO to MD in international banks. He is fascinated by the changes happening around us, the impact of technology on many industries, and the changing dynamics between small and large organizations.

He also believes that in a world led by technology, we shouldn't forget the importance of people. He is the co-founder of CFTE, the Centre for Finance, Technology and Entrepreneurship, whose objective is to help people improve their skills and find opportunities.

In 1999, he co-founded Ukibi, a precursor of LinkedIn. After 5 intense years, he fell by coincidence into banking and was fortunate to be an intrapreneur in international banks where he helped to build high growth businesses, with his last position as Head of Insurance Structuring at Citi in London.

He writes Disruptive Finance, is an Associate Fellow at Oxford, a member of ESMA's CWG for financial innovation, and a founding member of the Asian SuperCharger.

He is a frequent keynote speaker in Europe and Asia, likes to teach and share with students and entrepreneurs, and is regularly quoted in articles on innovation and finance.

Huy is a graduate from MIT (US), École Polytechnique (France) and ENPC (France). He is married and a happy father of 3 daughters.